Measles: Understanding Outbreaks

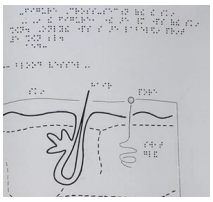

Identifier: 2386
Type: Map
Title: Measles: Understanding Outbreaks
Subject: People
Description: Measles is an air-born infection caused by a paramyxovirus, mostly common in early childhood. In the present day, measles is considered an extinct disease in most parts of the world. According to WHO, in 1980, before widespread vaccination, measles caused an estimated 2.6 million deaths each year. However, in the recent years, the once eradicated disease started resurfacing in countries like New Zealand, Australia, and United States (CDC). It is one of the leading causes of death among young children even though a safe and cost-effective vaccine is available (WHO).

An Exploration of New York Cities CitiBike

Type: Map
Title: An Exploration of New York Cities CitiBike
Subject: People
Description: Citi Bike is a bicycle sharing system established in 2013 in New York City. As of now, the nations largest bike-sharing system has 12,000 stations across Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, and Jersey City. Riding a bike is fun and healthy exercise. In urban areas like NYC, bike-sharing can also serve as a time-effective way of moving around tightly packed areas.
